

Fire & Smoke Damage Division

In the unfortunate event that you experience fire damage to your property, you should call Mendco Construction for professional fire restoration service. It is important that the cleanup begins as soon as possible. Smoke residues are acidic in nature and with time they will cause surfaces to corrode and stain permanently. Smoke residues that were pressurized during the fire will permeate cracks and crevices of building materials and deposit odor-causing residues.

Mendco Construction's fire restoration service professionals will work quickly to stop the smoke damage and restore your property and contents back to pre-fire condition by using cleaning systems and equipment that will help eliminate costly replacement of restorable items.

Smoke odors can be difficult to remove due to its penetration and absorption into building materials. Mendco Construction's fire restoration service providers have the knowledge, products and equipment to permanently remove these stubborn odors.

Fire Damage Restoration Solutions

When a fire occurs, putting the flames out as quickly as possible is of the utmost importance. However, dousing a fire's flames can cause its own set of problems. On top of the soot and smoke damage left behind by a fire, water damage becomes the property owner's next issue. Water must be removed and the building thoroughly dried as quickly as possible in order to prevent mold, which can grow rapidly in a high-humidity environment. Professional dehumidification services ensure that the relative humidity level appropriate for your building is restored, while mold remediation services eradicate all traces of mold, which can be damaging not only to the building, but potentially to the health of individuals who are exposed to it. Residue left behind by soot and smoke should to be dealt with next as this is a corrosive substance that, if left untreated, can erode surfaces, electronics, finishes, fabrics, and building materials, causing further damage to your property.

If you have experienced a fire and are in need of expert smoke and fire damage restoration services, contact Mendco Construction today and let our fire restoration and smoke damage mitigation professionals help get you back to business.
